After the Rupture: Japan and Europe in a Post-American World

The marriages between America and its Japanese and European allies were never easy, but all sides gained from them. Now that America has turned hostile to us both, Japan and Europe share a predicament: we cannot live entirely independently of America, but nor can we trust it. Whether the Trump effect proves temporary or permanent, we need to find ways to become more autonomous and more collaborative with other nations. This lecture will explore our options, while placing the rupture of “the West” in a broad geopolitical context.

2025. 11.26 [Wed.]
15:00-16:30 JST (14:00 Open)

What is a Tokyo College Ushioda Fellow?

The title of Fellow is conferred with support from the University of Tokyo Ushioda Memorial Fund. It is awarded to intellectuals who, together with members of the University, contemplate and act on the future of the Earth and human society, thereby contributing to the enhancement of the University's international presence. Fellows engage in activities over a five-year period.
